Ed,

The volunteer teachers were those I had mentored while at Tarantino, they left the school at the end of 2016 when they got disgruntled with the administration. Fortunately the facility we got were once used by a businessman to operate a school but mismanaged the school and students left leading to its collapse so we took it over in February this year.

In first term there were only 16 students, in second term the number went to 47 and by close of the year we had 98 students.

Most private schools here are opened by businessmen whose interest is basically making money and exploiting the teachers, parents and students neglecting the core purpose for the school. yet not many teachers are also able to come together or have the capacity to start their own school.

We therefore look towards fighting this form of exploitation by creating fair school that most rural parents can afford but with the most effective and reliable service. We target at average students that most of these private and pioneer schools ignore as dull and make a difference in their life and by that we shall be able to attract all grades of students

We hope to make the best out of this simple facility with the support from the parents and well wishers.

This year has been a year of marketing through our learners by giving them what they deserve. The team of teachers are extremely committed and we have promised our services will be voluntary for the next two years so that the little received from parents is used for expansion and for the welfare of the learners.

We already have overwhelming support from the District leaders after witnessing the level of teaching and learning going in the school.

We are determined to achieve this. We will greatly appreciate you support therefore.

Thank you. Maxwell
